Policy and Guidelines for Environmental Stewardship Management

Land and Houses Public Company Limited and its affiliates are aware of aggravating environmental problems that affect lives. Consequently, the Company therefore determines and plans to manage the use of natural resources for maximized ecological benefits and minimized negative impacts on the environment, by complying with applicable laws, rules, and regulations, including strict Environmental Impact Assessments (EIAs). The Company has defined policies and guidelines for environmental management in various aspects, including energy consumption, water management, and waste management. These accord with the material issues within the environmental aspects of the Company, namely cost-effective energy and resource management as well as design and consumption of resources that conserve and are environment-friendly, namely:

- Strictly comply with national environmental quality promotion and conservation laws and regulations as well as other environmental regulations. These cover resource consumption control, energy saving, water consumption, pollution management, and waste management arising from construction processes.
- Determine goals related to environmental and energy conservation for business operation. It is the duty of all executives and employees to engage in the implementation to mitigate negative impacts from business operation on the environment and establish sustainable environmental management.
- Strive to develop innovative products and services concerning environmental conservation to promote conscientious and optimal consumption of natural resources.
- Raise awareness of the importance and value of the environment among employees, suppliers, and all stakeholders, including support and promotion of various activities designed to raise awareness, and jointly protect the environment and natural resources in a sustainable manner and pass them on to the next generation.

These policy and guidelines for environmental management are effective from May 11, 2023.
